Standard rules of thumb are to generally stand tough 17 and more than, never stand a soft 17, double soft hands A,2 and A,3 vs 5-six, A,4 and A,five vs 4-six, and A,6 and A,7 vs 3-six. Every player has an independent game with the dealer, ????? so it is possible for the dealer to lose to a single player but nevertheless beat the other players in the identical round. The only time it really is seriously valuable to the player to take insurance coverage or a side bet is if the player holds a blackjack themselves. You "Bust" in Blackjack when you draw additional cards to your hand (by asking to "hit") and the combined total value exceeds "21". When you "Bust", you drop your wager and that round is over for you. If your 1st two cards are of equal worth, you have the choice of "splitting" them into two separate hands.

Having said that, they lose double if the dealer has a larger worth card.
