Ninety-eight % of providers have policies that make it clear sexual harassment is not tolerated, but several employees believe their providers are falling brief putting policies into practice. Only 62 percent of workers say that in the past year their companies have reaffirmed sexual harassment will not be tolerated, and a similar number say that they've received coaching or ???? ?? guidance on the subject. Furthermore, only 60 % of staff believe a sexual-harassment claim would be relatively investigated and addressed by their company—and just a single in three believe it would be addressed swiftly.
